LEAVE THE MATTER AS IT IS.

When the City Committee determined, at its last meeting, that its own members should be elected by the 1 toters of Richmond in the coming prime ary, it adopted a resolution more satisf actory to the people of this city than a nything which it has done since it gave u s a primary for the election of members of the Legislature last fall. It is now stated on t he streets that a concerted move will I be made at the next meeting of this cor amittee, on next Monday night, to get the a action reversed so that the committee wil I be chosen hereafter at packed ward a neetings-the old and objectionable way. This is a matter of the most vital importance to good politi es in Richmond. The people are entitled to have a voice in the selection of th ose who are to superintend the politic s of the Democratic party here, ar d the resolution which the committee adopted ought to be adhered to.

It behooves ewery Democrat in the city to make his voice heard, and to cause the committee to understand that the action they have taken is what the party desires, and I lat no change is wanted.

MR. NEEDHAGE : ON CLUBS.

Rev. George C. IN sedham is reported in yesterday's Timest as saying in a sermon at the Graces Street Presbyterian church a few evenly igs back that "the clubs of Richmond ,are no better than those of any other ofty. They are all the vilest dens of ladquity. When I make this assertion I know what I am talking a oout."

This was said of the social and not the political clubs. That Mr. Needha m thinks he knows what he was talking about we have not the slightest doubt, but that he is totally mistaken about trie matter is entirely certain. We happy in to know very intimately the way in which two of Richmond's social clribs are managed, and we know well that neither of these can properly be charged with being "a den of iniquity," or will a being anything at all akin to "dens of iniquity." We know also that they as e regularty attended by Christian gentles nen, who are members of them, who would not retain their membership in U iem an hour if they were liable to any su ch charge.

Many persons who are really unacquainted with the workings of social clubs in large cities assume them to be what Mr. Need ham thinks them, and, in reaching this conclusion without making the investigation necessary to forming a P. Thompson at Aberdeen, Miss.

fo By-matured judgment, they furnish one m sire illustration of the danger of judgit is a case until every side has been fully is avestigated and heard, When well managed, social clubs r fre under the government of the older sad more sedate members of the instijution, who are careful to suppress every r unifestation of what would conver them into Mr. Needham's "dens of iniquity." The young man who acquires n fondness for frequenting them is thus & scured against the demoralizing associations of the street bar-rooms, and is also secured associations which require I joth him and his companions to regulate

2 nents of a discipline that demands, as d ts first law, gentlemanly deportment and a regard for the rights and feelings of others. An influence of this sort exercised over him by men whom he is taught in his daily life to look up to and respect must be better for a young man than a daily association with the gamins of the street.

A VERY RUDE SHOCK. In a recent article analyzing Lord Rosebery's character, the London Saturday Review says: "If he regards, as he pretty certainly does regard, the fads of the older Radicals as doctrinaire nonsense, he has at least coquetted with the new labor theories, the new Socialism, and other things which, in the judgment of some of us, would make England little better worth living in than the United States."

This estimate of Lord Rosebery is not widely different from that which his two recent speeches has forced upon us. But it was not to remark on the Saturday Review's estimate of the English Premier mate of ourselves. It will be a great surprise to many Americans to learn that educated Englishmen look upon the United States as a place of residence somewhat as they look upon the dominions of King Lobenguela.

When Cicero had been governor of one of the provinces and was returning to Rome, he asked one of his acquaintances whom he met on the route what they said in Rome of the way he had governed the province. His friend replied that they had heard nothing in Rome about it. Now, here, we in America had been of the opinion that they talked about us in England a great deal, and that most Englishmen spent much of their time in vain regrets that fortune had denied them that residence here which all longed for but few could obtain. But now comes this brutal Saturday Review to rouse us from our delightful reveries and assure us they are nothing but reveries, and that people in England neither talk of us nor think of us, and look on us as little if any better than savages.

There is a very large body of our popu lation that will be able to endure this discovery, now that we know the worst but we fear for its effects upon some. The gentlemen who carry shepherd's crooks for walking canes, and turn up their pants because it is "waining in that may produce severe injury to their standing collars, when they know that an English swell tolerates them much as he does his poodle dog when he comes into the house with wet feet. We know and that is to give up imitation of English ways and appear as natural Americans, whereupon they may be mistaken for English cads along with being recognized as American fools.

SPIES AND INFORMERS,

Mr. Henderson, of North Carolina, may have been wrong in claiming in the House of Representatives on Wednesday that there were no more violations of th internal revenue laws in Virginia and North Carolina than elsewhere. We know nothing of the facts of the case, and are not, therefore, in a position to pass judgment upon that question. But he was perfectly right in expressing his indignation and scorn on account of the way our people are harried and worried by the spies which the Government hires to hunt out alleged violators of the internal revenue laws. Intoxicating liquors are undoubtedly a subject from which the Government should raise a large part of its revenues, but it is most unfortunate that it finds a necessity to raise that revenue though the aid of paid informers and secret agents, It is really a serious question if the revenue we raise from spirits is worth the price we thus pay for it. The exasperation caused to the people is bad enough, but the example of spies and informers treated as trusted agents of Government always before their eyes is ten thousand time worse. It a demoralizing and corrupting to the people in the highest degree.

DA GAMA'S FATE,

The statement now made that the Portuguese man of war on which Admiral Da Gama sought an asylum was permitted to pass the Government's ports at Rio without resistance upon an agreement that Da Gama and his fellow officers aboard the ship should not be permitted to land until negotiations, now going on between the Brazilian and the Portuguese Governments, settle the question whether or not they shall be surrendered to the Brazilian Government, is an interesting one. We most sincerely hope that the Portuguese Government, having given these officers an asylum, will not surrender them to the Brazilian Government to be made the victims of pretended trials, but of brutal military executions. Da Gama's cause may have been a bad one, though, with our limited information, we are disposed to believe that it was a good one. But the magnificent manner in which he commanded and led his men in the recent attack on one of the Government's shore positions roused a deep interest for him in the heart of every brave man. And every such man would look upon it as a crime to surrender a gallant officer like this to the brutal and inhuman treatment that awaits

EDITORIAL COMMENTS.

New York World: The temperance lecturers can now utilize Colonei J. Hampton Hoge as a terrible example. His bibulous habits have driven him to the belief that the foreigner pays the tax.

New York Times: Blair, meaning Biair, of New Hampshire, Henry W. Blair, is a man of woeful experiences. The enthusiasm with which people avoid him, after they have once become really aware of him, has undoubtedly repressed his erstwhile yearning ambitions and active desires for the good of the species. Otherwise how are we to account for the unanimity with which his colleagues and the reporters "shun to sit" with Blair since Blair has declined from the Senate to the House? That, also, is what Blair would like to know. f heir lives according to the require-

The New York Sun, of yesterday, thus comments on the Breckinridge-Pollard suit: "It constitutes only a warning against entering into a path which must inevitably have an ending so painful and disgraceful. This man and this woman kept up the outward form of affection when actually the feeling between them was rank hatred. They were criminals together, each distrustful of the other, and each distraught by the vile bondage, deceit, and perfidy into which they had fallen.

"More than that we cannot now say while the trial is still in progress, but so much may be said properly and profitably. It is a suit which ought to be reported fully as a duty to society, so that all men and women may learn its terrible lesson; and as the story has an absorbing interest the more it is told in its details, and thus is the more useful, we shall continue to present it In completeness to the end."

AN AUSTRALIAN'S SUICIDE.

Penniless and Desperate-Suit of Hess & Co. Against Bonsack Co.

LYNCHBURG, VA., March 22.-Special.-Henry Lederer, an Australian, late of Atlanta, was found dead in his room at the Pryor House, corner of Main and Ninth streets, early this morning. Dr. C. M. Blackford, the coroner, was summoned, and a slight investigation disclosed the fact that it was a case of suicide. An empty one-ounce phial labeled sulphate of morphine, told the story, but not one scrap of paper could be found giving a reason for the suicide. The desperate man knew that no ex-planation was needed.

He had previously attempted to kill himself by taking laudanum, and the people who kept the house knew that his penniless condition was the cause, Lederer was a bar-keeper and came to Lederer was a bar-keeper and came to Lynchburg from Atlanta about six weeks ago, in the hope of obtaining employ-ment in the wine room at the Hotel Car-roll. He took to drinking soon after his arrival here, and did not get the position. Since then he had pawned everything of value he had, and when he had exhausted all his resources, killed himself.

SEVERE ELECTRICAL STORM.

Miss Alice Hanks and Mr. Dodson Shocked in Pittsvivaria.

DANVILLE, VA., March 22.-Special .-A special to the Register gives an account of a severe electrical storm which occurred in the western part of Pittsylvania county yesterday. There was a terrible down-pour of rain, amounting almost to a water spout, while flash after flash of vivid lightning, accompanied by deafening peals of thunder, caused con-sternation. During the storm the house of Dr. Hanks, near Cascade, was struck by a bolt and considerably damaged. Miss Alice Hanks, his daughter, was severely shocked and rendered unconscious, and up to noon to-day had not

Three days is a very short time in which to cure a bad case of rheumatism, but it can be done if the proper treatment is adopted, as will be seen by the following from James Lambert, of New Brunswick, Ill.: "I was hadiy afflicted with rheumatism in the hips and legs, when I bought a bottle of Chamberiain's Pain Ealm. It cured me in three days, I am all right to-day, and would insist on every one who is afflicted with that terrible disease to use Chamberlain's Pain Baim and get well at once." THE TIMES DAILY FASHION HINT. Penitential Garb is at its Height Upon this Last Lenten Day.

TAN CLOTH.

At last we have reached the height of our penitential season. If there is one day in which we keep Lent more faithfully than any other it is on Good Friday. Without regard for the religious view of the case, it is not fashionable to be gay on this day, either in one's clothes or demeanor. It is not good form to entertain on that night of all the forty. The sambre gowns which one meets on the street may have a twofold meaning, a regard for the day, enhanced by the fact that they serve as a decided contrast to the gay gowns of the following Sunday sort of a dull background to a pretty

Yesterday the churches were filled with flowers, and throngs of eager sightseers surged from one sacred edifice to another to see the various decorations. There was not that sombreness of costume to be no-ticed among them which one observes on the avenue to-day. One is almost inclined to wonder if people promenade to parade their piety. Black and gray figures pass us on every side. Yesterday the same people were arrayed in dresses which, if not brilliant were at least pol aggressively not brilliant, were at least not aggressively

A gown in which I saw a lady attired yesterday as she entered Grace church was made of light tan cloth. There was an under bodice of green velvet, over which cloth was draped in cascades, re-sembling inverted revers. A long pointed overskirt reached to the bottom of the skirt. It was faced with green velve and was draped in cascades to the top On each side of this drapery the underskirt was parted, showing green velvet across which a tan cord laced back and forth. The sleeves were full to the elbow, and from there the sleeve was laced over green velvet in the same way as the skirt. Her hat had a wavy brim, and was trimmed with standing velvet bows and
